WEDDINGS

MISS MARGARET HANSCOM

The Hanscom residence on Vernon Street was the setting for a charming home wedding when, on Monday, Miss Margaret Janet Hanscom became the bride of Arnold Weare of York City, Maine. The Rev. Kingsley Hawthorne of the First Congregational Church performed the ceremony.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Edward Hanscom, is the granddaughter of the late well-known and well-loved educator, Dr. Frank E. Hanscom, for many years principal of Gould Academy.

Against a background of white chrysanthemums, the bride was beautiful in a suit of dove grey wool, with shoulder corsage of American beauty roses. Her only attendant, Miss Beatrice Forbes of Bethel, was gowned in tulle and wore white roses.

Raymond O. Weare was best man for the bridegroom, who is the son of Mrs. Raymond O. Weare and the late Mr. Weare of York City, Maine.

Only the immediate families of the couple were present at the ceremony. The informal reception which followed included about forty guests. The bride cut the cake in the traditional manner and the guests were served. Mrs. Grace MacFarlane, Mrs. Edmund Vachon, and Mrs. Harry Mason presiding at the refreshment table.

RYERSON-BONNEY

Miss Marilyn L. Bonney of West Paris and Elmer Ellsworth Ryerson of Milton were united in marriage Saturday evening, November 2, at the home of the officiating minister, Rev. Eleanore B. Epie of West Paris. The double ring service was used. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. James Ryerson of Rumford.

Mrs. Ryerson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bonney of West Paris and was graduated from West Paris High School, class of 1946.

The groom attended Bridgton Academy before entering service. He was discharged from the Air Corps after three and a half years service, 20 months of which were spent in flying combat. He is employed at Oxford Paper mill. They will reside at Rumford.

Mrs. Daniel Sawyer (Martha Smith) reached Rogersburg, Germany, Nov. 5. Mrs. Sawyer sailed from New York Oct. 22.

Mr. and Mrs. William Huntington of Hangeley are spending the week with their daughter, Mrs. H. Glenn Murphy and family.

Mrs. Frank E. Hanscom is spending some time at her home here after visiting with relatives at Portland and Ashburnham, Mass. Misses Patry O'Brien and Carol Robertson, student nurses at the St. Louis Hospital, Berlin, spent the week end at their homes in town.

ROBERTSON-CHASE

Miss Elizabeth Mary Chase, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Chase of Hanover and Henry Robertson, son of Mrs. Sadie Robertson of Bethel and Herman Robertson of Connecticut, were married Friday evening at the Methodist parsonage. Rev. William Penner officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The attendants were Miss Helen Robertson, Bethel, sister of the bridegroom and Maynard Chase, Hanover, brother of the bride. The bride wore a brown ensemble with a corsage of red roses. Miss Robertson wore an ensemble of American Beauty and a corsage of yellow roses.

The couple left for Portland, Friday evening. They will reside at Bethel.

MISS NAOMI ENMAN

Miss Naomi Enman of Bethel announced the engagement of her daughter, Naomi Elsie to Henry Blodreau of Gorham, N. H.

Miss Enman attended schools at Newry and Bethel and is employed at the Priscilla Restaurant, in Berlin. N. H. Mr. Blodreau attended Gorham schools and served two and one half years in the South Pacific area. He is employed at the Brown Co. in Berlin. No date has been set for the wedding.

Amid a shower of confetti the couple left for a ten day honeymoon motor trip through the New England states. Upon their return they will reside on the Weare estate at York City, Maine.

The list of invited guests from town included: Mrs. Frank E. Hanscom, Mrs. E. Alphonse Van Den Kerckhoven, Mr. and Mrs. Ellyer C. Park, Headmaster and Mrs. Elwood Ireland, Lt. and Mrs. Edmond Vachon, Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Kimball Ames, Mrs. H. P. Austin, Mr. and Mrs. Gayle Foster, Mrs. Grace MacFarlane, Mrs. Walter Tleander, Miss Beatrice Forbes, Mrs. Daniel Forbes, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Van Den Kerckhoven and daughter Judy, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Van Den Kerckhoven, Rev. and Mrs. Kingsley Hawthorne and daughter, Sarah Ann. Guests from out of town: Mrs. Raymond O. Weare, York City, Maine; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond O. Weare Jr., York City, Maine; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Parker, York Beach, Maine; Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Lund, Ogunquit, Maine.

GYM FLOOR SET-UP

EXCELLENT EXAMPLE OF SCHOOL COOPERATION

During the last week of October a quiet but very important activity has been going on down in the Field House: the annual dragging out and laying down of the basketball floor. Cheerfully and willingly the members of all of Mr. Anderson's manual arts classes have performed this heavy work for the benefit of the squads which will be working out here shortly. Under "Coach" supervision, the fitting together of the many heavy wooden pieces has gone on quickly and efficiently; far different from work with plane or lathe, drawing board or saw, this work has called upon the strength and agility of the shop lads. This relieved the men who are custodians of the gym, grounds and dormitories for other work. And this appears to be the place to give due credit and a hearty vote of thanks for a good job well done as it has been so often done at the Field House since its erection six years ago.

Herbert B. Bean of Old Orchard Beach has been spending several days at the Bean camp in Albany.

DR ANSON H. KENDALL

Dr. Anson Herbert Kendall, died Saturday at the Peterboro, N. H. hospital. A physician and surgeon, Dr. Kendall was located at East Jaffrey, N. H.

He was born at Sunday River, Newry, May 25, 1888, the son of Herbert and Sarah Spinney Kendall and was a graduate of Gould Academy in 1912. He also attended Harvard College and Boston University and served his internship at Massachusetts General Hospital.

Surviving are his wife who was formerly Dorothy Britton; a daughter, Edna; three sisters, Mrs. David Durnell and Mrs. John Tlema of Arlington, Va.; Miss Charlotte Kendall of Winthrop, Mass.; two aunts; several cousins. Funeral services were held Tuesday at East Jaffrey.

VARIETY SURPRISE SHOWER

Mrs. Emma Van Den Kerckhoven assisted by Mrs. Louis Van Den Kerckhoven, Mrs. Grace MacFarlane and Mrs. Walter Tleander was the hostess at a variety surprise shower Saturday evening. Miss Peggy Hanscom was guest of honor. She received many gifts. Those present were: Mrs. Edward Hanscom, Teddy Hanscom, Mrs. Louis Van Den Kerckhoven, Nancy and Judy Van Den Kerckhoven, Mrs. Ellyer C. Park, Mrs. Harry Mason, Mrs. Gayle Foster, Mrs. Elwood Ireland, Mrs. Vernon Brown, Mrs. Olive Larvey, Mrs. Daniel Forbes, Miss Beatrice Forbes, Mrs. Eugene Van Den Kerckhoven, Miss Lois Ann Van Den Kerckhoven, Miss Irene Wright, Miss Jackie MacFarlane, Mrs. Grace MacFarlane, Mrs. Cella Gorman, Mrs. Elmer Bennett, Mrs. Robert Lord, Miss van Griggs, Mrs. Emma Van Den Kerckhoven and Mrs. Walter Tleander.

PARENT TEACHERS ASSOCIATION

The objects of the Parent-Teacher Association are: To promote the welfare of children and youth in home, school, church and community.

To raise the standards of home life.

To secure adequate laws for the care and protection of children and youth.

To bring into closer relation the home and the school that parents and teachers may cooperate intelligently in the training of the child.

To develop between educators and the general public such united efforts as will secure for every child the highest advantages in physical, mental, social and spiritual education.

The P. T. A. is Educational, Non-commercial, Nonsectarian, Nonpartisan, and can function successfully only if it is supported wholeheartedly by all those involved.

It is urgently desired that all members and friends of Bethel P. T. A. will make a special effort to attend our meetings this year.

Many things may be accomplished by your cooperation.

As at great many of our pupils are from North, South, East and West Bethel, Northwest Bethel, Sunday River, Middle Intervale, Albany, Mason and Greenwood, the parents of these children are cordially invited to attend and to take an active part in our meetings.

Again as last year, the Hot Lunch Project is well under way and plans are being made to serve lunch lunches after the Christmas recess. Mrs. Edith Rowe, assisted by Mrs. Patricia Bennett and Mrs. Sarah Hanson are the committee in charge and again covered the service of Mrs. Galt to prepare the lunches.

Our next meeting will be held November 19th at 8 o'clock in the gym grade room at the Grammar school. We are fortunate to have as guest speaker that evening Miss Muriel McAllister, State Supervisor of Elementary Education. Miss McAllister will discuss "Teach in Elementary Education." This is sure to be very interesting and worthwhile and we sincerely hope to have a good attendance. Refreshments will be served by hostesses Mrs. Norma Jodrey and Mrs. Margarette Sumner. Mrs. H. H. Hutchins and Mrs. Herbert Kirtledge.

RENT INSPECTORS TO ADVISE LANDLORDS

Wesley L. Whippley, Area Rent Director, announced that five members of his staff will establish temporary headquarters in Oxford, Kennebec and Knox Counties to advise landlords concerning regulations under Rent Control, which became effective in these counties November 1.

Oxford County landlords will probably continue until the end of the Rent Registration Period. The rent will be set at 10 percent below the level at which it was paid the day per week in such places as Rumford, Norway, Augusta, Waterville and Rockland.

NAVY SEEKS CANDIDATES FOR OFFICER COLLEGE TRAINING PROGRAM

The Navy announced last week that the first nation-wide competitive examination for its Officer College Training Program has been scheduled for January 18, 1947, and will be open to high school seniors or graduates within the age requirements. Successful candidates will be given a four-year college education at government expense and will be commissioned officers of the regular Navy or Marine Corps, or of the Reserve, upon graduation. Application forms must be forwarded in time for receipt by December 17.

Students selected by these competitive examinations will be offered entrance in either the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps (NROTC) or the Naval Aviation College Program (NACP). Those selecting the former program will attend one of the 62 colleges or universities having NROTC units where they will receive from the government the cost of their tuition, books, and normal fees and $50.00 a month for the four year period of education. Upon graduation, they may be commissioned in the Regular Navy and will be required to serve two years on active duty if commissioned. Upon completion of these two years, they may apply for a permanent commission in the Regular Service or transfer to the Reserve and return to civilian life.

Those selecting the Naval Aviation College Program may go to any accredited university, college or junior college of their choice, providing they are accepted for entrance, and receive the same government benefits. After two years of study they will enter a two-year program of flight training and flight duty as midshipmen, after which they will be commissioned as officers and serve a year on flight duty. Upon completion of this duty, they are eligible for a permanent commission in the Regular Navy or Marine Corps and, if accepted, will be sent to a designated school for two years of further professional education with active duty pay. If they do not wish to remain in the Regular Service, they will be given Reserve commission and released to inactive duty and provided an opportunity to return to college for two more years with tuition, books and fees and $100 a month furnished by the Navy so that they may complete their college education.

Mr. E. F. Ireland, Headmaster of Gould Academy is acting as the Navy's local civilian representative and will be pleased to provide specific information about this program including the place of competitive examination, application forms, and necessary age and school qualifications.

Soviet Policy Holds Key to Parley

U.S. Awaits Russian Game at Foreign Ministers' Session

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNS Service, 1016 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y.—Of course this dateline isn't official. But, since the brand new station where I got off had a nice "United Nations" sign on it in bright Pennsylvania red and gold, I can call it that. The United Nations is really meeting in two different places: The assembly, where I happen to be at this writing, at Flushing, N. Y., and the headquarters of the security council, miles away at Lake Success.

The broadcasting booth in which I sit looks right down on the first row of delegates, the United Kingdom under my chin, United States next, then Uruguay, then Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Senator Austin, the white-haired and dignified head of our delegation, sits on the end seat. Foreign Minister Molotov, who has deputy delegate Vishinsky on his right, the translator, then Ambassador Gromyko on his left, sits about in the middle of his crowd.

The two groups represent clashing ideologies, conflicting ideas. But neither wears a steel helmet or carries a Tommy gun. They are in peaceful conflict to avoid conflict.

Force Red

Hand at Paris

Even the most cynical now admit that the Paris meetings served to reveal what the Russian objective was and temporarily, at least, Byrnes was able to block that objective. It was plain from the beginning that Russia had one negative purpose and that was to prevent any conclusive action regarding the situation in Europe which she could not dictate. Chaos, if not time, fought on her side.

As the negotiations continued, however, slowly out of the mists along the Volga another shape be-

Wallace that the United States can pursue some middle-of-the-road policy and that East and West can thus move together without friction. There is no question, however, that the task that Secretary Byrnes has set out for himself admits of no apportionment.

Draw Line on

Soviet Expansion

There have been a long series of books by experts and others, telling just what is wrong with our foreign policy and what might have been done or might be done to improve it. William Bullitt tried in a book (already mentioned in these columns) to show that Russia's dreams of empire are nothing new, that the Soviets are merely taking up where the Czars left off. More recently Louis Fischer has come along with his "Great Challenge." Edgar Ansel Mower, reviewing this book in the Saturday Review of Literature, says that "if Henry Wallace had read and understood this book, he would not . . . push a completely unrealistic policy of appeasement of Soviet Russia." Mower probably would be the last person to claim that he was prejudiced in favor of the Soviet rule but he is certainly familiar with his subject and his comment is worth consideration. As for Fischer, he laughs at the idea put forth by the Russians that all we have to do is to assure Russia of her security, remove her suspicions and fears of democracy, and then she will march shoulder to shoulder with the rest of us. Fischer says Russia's behavior is explained not by fear of attack but by certainty that she will not be attacked. This belief seems to be back of the American action here today. It is to be hoped that during the negotiations at Lake Success, Russia's more specific objectives will be revealed as they were in Paris. Fischer claims that "Russia is not afraid and not suspicious for two clear reasons: The British empire is in decline and on the defensive; America rushed from victory to headlong psychological and military demobilization." If that is true then it must be made came visible. It was the materialization of one phase of the divide and conquer principle. In this case it was the open bid for German sympathy which Russia hoped would turn the Germans in the American, British and French zones away from those countries and toward Russia. Although it was Russia itself which prevented the economic unification of Germany (plus Communist influences in France and French fears it was Russia which suddenly offered the grandiose plan of a unified Germany with a hint at a rectification of the eastern frontier at the expense of Poland. This sensational suggestion burst over Europe and the conference like a thunderbolt, but thanks to the quick action of Byrnes it proved a boomerang. Byrnes knew what to shoot at and he shot.

The Wallace incident which for 24 hours threatened to cut Byrnes support from under him fortunately had just the opposite effect. Byrnes insisted on repudiation of Wallace by the President and got it. Then Byrnes took the stump, showed that American policy would give Germany everything that the Russian plan would give her and made it clear that the question of the eastern frontier might well be opened with the United States sympathetic toward a revision of the boundary to the advantage of Germany.

Thus in a lightning flash Russia's policy was shattered and immediately blocked. The question now remains as to what line of approach the Russians have decided upon. If any. In the meeting of the assembly they tried to continue their obstructive tactics.

The real test will come in the foreign ministers' convales at New York.

There is a considerable element in the United States by no means entirely composed of concerned Communists or their more hesitant fellow-travelers which believes with former Secretary of Commerce very clear to the Soviets that regardless of what we may think about the decline of the British empire and America's sharp reaction against military activity, there is nevertheless a line beyond which Russian expansion will not be allowed to go. It is to be hoped that line already has been reached. The necessity, however, is to make it very clear to both the American public and the Russian government that this point has been reached. Since it is admitted that Russia cannot and does not want to fight, it is not a question of war.

It is expected that the pin-pricking policy by Yugoslavia will continue. At this writing further efforts to obtain control of the Dardanelles are limited to name-calling in the Russian press. It must also be remembered that when the United States put its foot down and Russia saw that it would not pay to go farther, Tito could go into reverse.

'SQUARE DEAL'

Small Business Seeks New Unit

WASHINGTON — Organization of a "strong, integrated government agency" to take care of all government activities concerned with small business is the objective of a campaign launched by the American Association of Small Business. The new agency would supplant the present divided authority resting in the department of commerce and Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

In urging the immediate introduction of the needed legislation to set up such a small business agency — and to do it directly after the new congress shall have convened — the association is seeking only a proper rearrangement of already existing and long-deferred programs of government in behalf of small business.

QUEENS OF SEA, IN WAR AND PEACE . . . The mighty battleship USS Missouri, on which the Jap surrender terms were signed, and the giant SS. Queen Elizabeth, which served as a troopship during the war and now is back in service as a luxury passenger liner, are shown in New York harbor.

NEWS REVIEW

Violence Marks Strike; New Arms Curb Sought

LABOR:

Militant

Police were hard put to maintain order at the Allis-Chalmers tractor plant at Milwaukee, Wis., as striking pickets of the CIO-United Automobile Workers bucked a back to work movement of over 3,000 employees. As violence mounted, the number of returning workers was cut in half.

As militant pickets turned over cars attempting to enter the plant, clashed with returning workers and hurled stones at company windows, county and suburban police were compelled to appeal to Milwaukee authorities for reinforcements. Over 200 of Milwaukee's finest were sent to the plant, but even so the enlarged police detail encountered difficulty holding the strikers in check.

Allis-Chalmers remained adamant against granting UAW a closed shop as the strike entered its seventh month. While agreeing to check off union dues with workers' permission, the company stood out against compromise on compelling employees to join the UAW.

FARM MACHINERY:

Huge Demand

Despite heavy production, farm machinery manufacturers will not be able to meet the big demand for equipment for at least another year, according to officials of the National Retail Farm Equipment association meeting in Chicago.

With demand high, dealers have been able to meet only 40 per cent of their orders and manufacturers have not promised great improvement in 1947. It was said. Farmers' increased interest in equipment was said to stem from wartime emphasis on more efficient operations and large accumulation of funds.

FULL SYMPATHY . . . The reason for that delighted grin that illuminates the face of Little Robert Turzak, 9, is the unexpected windfall of a holiday that came when teachers in four Rankin, Pa., schools quit work.

U. N.:

In Accord

The U. S. and Russia came off all even in their first swap at the United Nations assembly in New York. If anything, the U. S. got the better of the exchange as Delegate Warren R. Austin of Vermont conducted himself with a gentlemanly reserve that contrasted with Foreign Minister Molotov's vitriol.

Molotov was the first to speak, calling for international disarmament, a report on the number of allied troops in non-enemy states, retention of the veto power of the Big Five in the security council. He bitterly attacked U. S. and British imperialists, headed by Winston Churchill, for seeking world domination.

Ignoring Molotov's political charges, Austin entered into a discussion of the proposals raised by the Russians.

If the Russians wanted international disarmament, the U. S. would gladly oblige, provided an adequate system of inspection and other safeguards would be established to guarantee fulfillment of the program. After the last war, Austin recalled, the U. S. accepted the principle of disarmament but remained alone in carrying it out.

If the Russians desired a report on the number of Allied troops in non-enemy states, the U. S. suggested that the check be extended to former enemy countries as well. (Such an all inclusive report would provide the world with an adequate estimate of Russian troop strength behind the Iron curtain, said by Churchill to total 200 divisions.) If the Russians opposed a modification of the veto power at this time, the U. S. also was against revision of the U. N. charter. However, the U. S. hoped that the Big Five could get together in the future to modify the veto in the case of peaceful settlement of disputes, although retaining it on the question of applying force.

FAO:

U. S. Backs Down

Having heartily endorsed a plan of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization at Copenhagen, Denmark, for distribution of food to needy countries at bargain prices, the U. S. repudiated its position as an FAO commission met in Washington, D. C., to work out details of the project.

Under the plan, FAO would have purchased food from surplus producing countries out of a revolving fund contributed by member nations. When the world price for food would have gone above a predetermined level, then FAO would have sold its reserves to needy buyers at the lower figure.

The Influence of the Radio

Teacher—Now, Willie, how much is two times one?
Willie—Go ahead!
Teacher—What do you mean "go ahead?"
Willie (anxiously) — Go ahead and tell me how much I get if I come up with the right answer!

Teacher—For that you stay after school. Johnny Smith, you were very poor in your reading test. Let me see what you can do, beginning on page 6.

Johnny—The white cat saw the gray mouse under the tall chair.

Teacher—That's fine.

Johnny—Now can I go for the jackpot?

Teacher—Such children! Minnie Potter, how do you spell "apple?"

Minnie—You mean backwards?

Teacher—Why backwards?

Minnie—That's the way they spell everything today.

Teacher—Just spell "apple" forwards.

Minnie (peevishly) — My daddy says that if I spell "apple" forwards I won't get anywhere with them. He says that to get anything across and make big sales you got to spell it backwards.

Teacher—Who's running this school, your father or I?

A child—Would you mind repeating the question?

Teacher—This is getting just too much. Steven Gates, if Kate has two plums and Nellie has four plums how many plums have they together?

Steven—Could I ask one question first?

Teacher—Certainly.

Steven—What is the jackpot now?

Teacher (pretty frantic) — I'm beside myself. I'm dazed and exasperated. I don't know what to do with you children.

A Little Girl (who has been on one of those juvenile advice hours)—Well, I think your problem could be solved by relaxing. You need more rest. If I were you I would . . .

Teacher—You children are awful. There is only one little boy in the class who is really intelligent and whose standing is high in all subjects. I am going to call on Jasper Loobey to show you how to answer questions. Jasper Loobey, please stand up!

A Little Boy—Jasper Loobey isn't here today. His mother asked me to tell you she had to keep him out as he had to be on a Quiz Kid hour this afternoon.

(Teacher leaps through the window screaming, "Wonderful! Perfect! That wins you 10 silver dollars.")

Bad News From High Court

According to reports, Justice Robert Jackson and Justice Hugo Black ignore each other and do not even speak as the new Supreme court season gets under way. "Neither looked at the other at any time. They sat several seats apart, and at no time did they speak," says a news item.

This depresses us deeply. If we can't have unity, peace, understanding and brotherly love on the highest court in our land, how can we have it on lower levels? There is something scary in the thought of the United States Supreme court being no different from the lawyers and their clients.

We had a case all prepared for carrying to the Supreme court, in fact we had just christened a new carrier to do the job, but we phoned our attorney and suggested that he take the appeal only through courts that got along well, and stop the minute he ran into some tribunal full of hard looks and cold shoulders. Our lawyer argued back. He contended that it might be a break to submit the case to judges not on speaking terms.

The more we study these photographs of disorders in Hollywood, the more we expect to hear of a scene of violence being called off because the photographer was not ready. And of a case where the cops who slugged it out with the strikers agreed to do it all over for a "retake."

About Bob Neyland

It was generally accepted that it would take Neyland a year or so to rebuild a winning team against the powerful opposition the South always offers. But in his first year back he had Neyland's volunteers heading the Southern parade, at least a stride in front of Wally Dull's Georgia delegation.

JUST how long the new boom that has hit sports of every variety will last is anybody's guess.

This includes baseball, football, racing, basketball, golf, hockey, tennis, boxing, curling, bowling, shot putting, table tennis, glin rummy, javelin throwing, hunting, fishing, automobile racing or jumping through a hoop. Tell - end baseball teams draw over a million. Many times beaten football teams pack the stands.

Promoters, or others who take credit for this amazing public surge in their own line are merely being goofy. They don't even have to be smart or good. Just open the gate. Make it a dog fight. It doesn't seem to matter.

But there is at least one detail that can't be missed. In this country or nation of some 1 million square miles and some 140 million sport-loving people, there is room for two major professional football leagues.

The New York Giants proved that when, facing double competition from the Yankees and the Dodgers, they picked the Polo Grounds with their greatest crowd. The Cleveland Browns, in the new league, have passed any expected mark. They have set new records up above 70,000.

So far, in their exhibition and their scheduled games, both leagues have gone far beyond early expectations.

The situation hasn't been so hot in several spots, including Los Angeles—a hot college center—but the general average has been exceptional.

The Giants could play at least one game a season before 100,000 spectators—if there were room enough to park the human frame.

We still believe, as far as the two leagues are concerned, that there is room enough in this country for 16 pro teams, 8 in each league. And both leagues can save enough to pack a mint by working out the same arrangement the National and American baseball leagues have today.

The rivalry of the two leagues has made baseball what it is. The same inter league rivalry, with a postseason championship, will be just as effective for pro football. In such an event, we could have results thrown against futile arguments.

The Two Best Backs

Several correspondents have written in lately, asking if any other football team ever had a pair of backs to match Blanchard and Davis, Army's terrifying football twins. Let's look at the record, as Al Smith used to say.

Carleton's Indians once had Thorpe and Guyon—not too bad. Harvard had Mann and Brickley. Yale had Coy and Phillips. Michigan had Heston and Boss Weeks. Cornell offered Pann and Kaw. Pennsylvania had Hollenback and Manier. Stanford had Grayson and Hamilton. Notre Dame has had many great pairs—a longer list than most of the others.

Minnesota, Tennessee, Alabama—these and many others—have had strong backfield combinations, counting only two men.

But we can't locate at the moment any other combination that ranks with Doc Blanchard and Glenn Davis in all-around ability and destructive effectiveness.

In making a complete check you'll come upon these facts—

1. Davis and Blanchard are brilliant ball carriers, through the line or out in the open. Both are extremely fast.

2. Both can throw a pass and both can handle a pass.

3. Both are excellent blockers.

4. Both know how to tackle and are strong defensively.

5. Both are dangerous opponents against a rival pass.

6. Both can kick.

7. Both are packed with stamina, and durability and both give all they have at every start. Neither is temperamental or swelled-headed. They happen to be two fine kids who love the game for the love of it.

In looking back many years over a long list we can't locate any team that had any such pair among its backfield talent, not for a few games but through the greater part of three hard seasons.

When you've seen Blanchard and Davis turned loose on some field you've looked upon the best that football has ever had to offer.

About Bob Neyland

Bob Neyland of Tennessee, now General Neyland, an old West Pointer, left his coaching job in 1942 for army duty.

It was generally accepted that it would take Neyland a year or so to rebuild a winning team against the powerful opposition the South always offers. But in his first year back he had Neyland's volunteers heading the Southern parade, at least a stride in front of Wally Dull's Georgia delegation.

The Sweeping Tides

by H. M. EGBERT W. N. U. SERVICE

Mark Darrell, young American lumberman, is boss of a lumber camp near St. Victor, Canada. He and his assistant, Nat Page, almost lose their lives when their boat strikes a rock. They clamber ashore and are met by the lighthouse keeper, Andre Galpeant. When the old man discovers their identity, he immediately becomes hostile. With him is a young and pretty woman, Madame Madeleine Kinross, a widow. She owns the timberland that Mark and his backers have leased. She, too, shows her dislike for the two Americans, but is coldly polite and provides them food and lodging. Mark and Nat are puzzled by this reception, but are too tired to wonder much.

CHAPTER II

The sun was streaming brightly into the room when they were awakened by the boy, carrying a tray with eggs and toast, coffee and preserves of wild strawberries. He set it down on the table, favored them with a sour grin and withdrew.

They stared about them, with difficulty taking in, for the moment, the circumstances of their arrival. "Breakfast in bed! Can you beat that?" asked Nat. "Gosh, I'm as hungry as a bear, Mark."

They ate and drank, changed the clothes in which they had slept for their old ones, now dry, looked at each other and laughed. "Everything I had in the world was in that old valise," said Nat. "Guess we'll make quite a sensation in the local dry-goods store, buying out their stock. Let's take a look-see outside."

Nobody was stirring outside the house, and the shades of Madeleine Kinross' room were down. In front of them were more rough-trekked steps, leading up to the elevation of the ridge.

At the top, Nat looked about him and whistled. Slowly he moved around the compass, taking in the whole view. And Mark, who had never seen it from that point before, looked about in equal admiration. But mixed with this was a passionate determination not to be ousted by Broussac, whatever reason he might have to allege for his communication.

They were standing at the commencement of a sort of natural rock bridge, about wide enough for two carts to pass each other. On either side the land fell away so sharply as to convey the impression of tremendous height.

Behind them was the all-but-land on which stood the lighthouse and the other buildings, with the blue St. Lawrence beyond, and the dim outlines of the south shore, hazy in the far distance. In front of them, straggling down to the little harbor, was St. Victor, a mere line of wood shacks.

Beyond the little wharf Mark could see the mill, the long flume and the dam, and, higher up, the cleft of the St. Victor river, and the banks, still snow-covered, with the great trees towering over all.

Among the schooners was a trim motor-yacht, anchored to the head of the wharf.

"Some place," said Nat, "you bet."

"How about having it out with Madame Kinross?"

"I've an idea," said Mark, "that Broussac's aboard that yacht. I guess my wire upset him more than his letter did me."

"If he is, we ought to know soon. I guess the news of our arrival has already spread to the village."

"Let's go down and see. We hold the winning hand, so let's play it."

Women appeared instantaneously at the doors of the shacks. They stared at the two; one clutched a child as it was about to run toward the strangers, dragged it to her, and thrust it, screaming, inside the cabin. A boy thumbed nose and sneered invective.

Mark Proves He Can Defend Himself

A little group of habitants was forming at the head of the wharf, where they had been mending fishing-nets or sunning themselves upon the banks. Within a minute, just as Mark and Nat had reached the hotel, a half-dozen had been formed about them, and the mutterings were becoming curses.

Monsieur Hector Mackintosh, the landlord, a thickset, burly man of fifty, was standing in his shirt-sleeves at the hotel entrance. Using a tooth-pick vigorously, he failed to recognize Mark's salutation.

"You do not seem to remember me, Monsieur Mackintosh?" asked Mark, a deceptive softness in his voice.

"No, I do not remember you, whoever you are, and my hotel is full," growled the landlord.

The curses had become shouts. The half-circle was beginning to close in. Things looked ugly for the strangers.

"What's that they're saying?" asked Nat Page.

"They're calling us spies and detectives from Quebec. They think we've come to investigate their gear before they start for the seal-grounds," Mark answered.

"Tell them we're not detectives!" shouted Nat.

"Let them find it out," grinned Mark, and swung about by instinct as a huge man came rushing at him from behind, knife in hand. Next instant this assailant found his knife-hand held in a firm grasp, and his head under Mark's arm, while Mark's other fist pummeled the imprisoned face until its owner yelled for mercy.

Mark flung him away. The two were completely ringed now, and a sudden silence had fallen, ominous because it was evident that St. Victor's blood was up, and that it was nursing itself for something more murderous than before.

Then suddenly Madeleine Kinross' clear, high voice rose above the crowd, and, turning, Mark saw her standing a little distance away. She was wearing a sweater and skirt, high boots, a little cap over her dark hair, and it was clear that she had discovered Mark's and Nat's absence, and followed them into the village.

"Leave those two men alone!" she cried. "Ah, Louis Larousse," she cried to the big man who had held the knife, as he stumbled past her, his hands to his discoloring face, "you got just what you deserved! Are you not ashamed, all of you, to set upon these two strangers, who were shipwrecked on the island?"

"Some day he will return. I know it, I feel it."

point last night, and owe their lives to a miracle of God?"

Down the street in her wake came the portly figure of the cure, who had just received news of the trouble. It seemed to add point to the girl's outcry. The muttering crowd drew back and was silent.

"Are you not ashamed of yourselves, I say?" Madeleine Kinross continued. "They are not spies nor detectives. I do not know who spread this stupid story among you. I have told you that they are not, but you will not believe me."

"Some place," said Nat, "you bet."

"How about having it out with Madame Kinross?"

"I've an idea," said Mark, "that Broussac's aboard that yacht. I guess my wire upset him more than his letter did me."

"If he is, we ought to know soon. I guess the news of our arrival has already spread to the village."

"Let's go down and see. We hold the winning hand, so let's play it."

Women appeared instantaneously at the doors of the shacks. They stared at the two; one clutched a child as it was about to run toward the strangers, dragged it to her, and thrust it, screaming, inside the cabin. A boy thumbed nose and sneered invective.

"Some day he will return. I know it, I feel it. And it is my duty, as his wife, to preserve the timber rights on his property. Come, am I not speaking rightly? You, Monsieur Lacombe," she turned to Mark, "are you not right? Do you believe my husband is dead?"

The portly cure remained as silent as the crowd.

"I have watched you all. When I say that the silhouette is not dead, you look at me as if I were crazy. But I am not crazy. I will return, and I must protect his rights. Therefore," she turned to Mark, "you will, of course, rescind that agreement that you made with Monsieur Broussac last fall."

"I'm sorry," said Mark, "but I have two other persons to consider besides myself. It is a matter of business investment, and will have to go through."

"You mean to say you will not? That you will stay here in defiance of the wishes of everybody, and try to run that mill?"

"Yes," answered Mark, still boiling over at the thought of his rejection. "I will neither be intimidated nor appealed to. Yes," he added, glancing at the gaping faces, and speaking in French, "I shall remain here."

Suddenly cries arose from the direction of the wharf. A man came striding along it, a man in a spruce blue suit, with a fur coat with black lamb collar. A man of about forty years, with a trim black moustache, an intelligent face, a lounging, studded carelessness in his walk—Horace Broussac.

Still that silence persisted, until Broussac came up to where Mark confronted Madeleine Kinross. He raised his black lamb cap, and offered Mark his hand. Mark saw no reason to refuse to take it.

"You gave me a fine chase, young man," said the lawyer. "Lucky I had a friend who was willing to lend me his yacht. And I hear you nearly got drowned last night into the bargain."

"He says he will not go," said Madeleine, wringing her hands. "How much money does he need to go, Cousin Horace?"

"Which is precisely the point," said Broussac, speaking in English now, which Mark could see nobody, not even Madeleine or the cure, understood. He motioned Mark a foot or two away. He shook his finger in kindly reproof.

"Legally nobody can deny your right to the lease I signed with you on behalf of my ward last fall," he said. "Madame Kinross is now of age. That does not cancel the lease. But she feels so strongly against the intrusion of outsiders into St. Victor, against the alienation of her late husband's lands, that I am forced to ask you for a cancellation."

"Since the lease was signed, her fortunes have improved through a wise speculation. In brief, Monsieur, if you had written me, instead of rushing up here, and nearly losing your life, I should have offered you five thousand dollars for the cancellation of that lease."

Mark wondered what other prospective lessee Broussac had got, and how much more he was willing to pay, that he should be willing to make that offer.

"I'm sorry—no," he replied. "The contract stands."

Broussac's face grew red. "Understand, Mr. Darrell, I am not to be bargained with," he cried. "If you are holding out for six, I might pay six. Not a cent more. Come, you have lost nothing. What do you say?"

"The lease stands," answered Mark. "That's all."

"That's your last word?"

"It is."

"And how do you think you are going to run the mill at a profit in this fishing and sealing country, when even I failed? How are you going to operate in the face of the universal opposition of these people? They don't want outsiders. They won't work for you. You'll lose everything."

"That's your last word?" asked Mark. "Then listen to me. I'll run that mill, and if I encounter any opposition from you, or any more violence, such as has occurred this morning, I shall hold you personally responsible, Monsieur Broussac. I shall likewise take it up with the Bar Association. My backers are not without influence at Quebec. Now it's up to you."

Broussac's face was a study in mottled red and white. He began breathing hard, like a man who has run a race. He watched Mark's face closely.

"Very well," he answered. "Try to run the mill. There shall be no opposition from me, no violence. But try—only try!" He raised his voice in French. "Monsieur Darrell has come here to work the mill, and to ship lumber," he shouted. "If any man here annoys him in any way, I promise him six months in the Quebec Jail. Voila! I trust," he continued suavely, "that we shall be friendly enemies, Mr. Darrell."

"St. Victor Changes Its Attitude"

"I'm satisfied," said Mark. Unconsciously he had turned his eyes upon Madeleine's face. The stern sternation and anger that he saw there seemed unaccountable for by the situation Broussac, of course, had been responsible for her change of mind, but what game was the shrewd lawyer playing, and what better offer had he had than the customary slumpage fee that Mark had agreed to in the contract?

The attitude of St. Victor had completely changed. Monsieur Hector Mackintosh, the landlord of the hotel, had suddenly remembered Mark, and his hotel was not empty. Life was all activity when Mark and Nat took up their quarters there late the same afternoon, without returning to the lighthouse.

Alphonse Vitard, the storekeeper opposite the hotel, a tall, lean man, who had formerly followed the sea, like nearly all St. Victor, was the mayor. He was most affable. His spring shipment, he regretted, was not yet arrived, but he had shirts, beautiful shirts from Montreal, mackinaws, underwear, shoes—in fact, all the essentials of a gentleman's toilet.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Children Get Benefits

Approximately 700,000 children whose fathers died as a result of World War II service are receiving monthly compensation benefits, ranging from $15.00 to $30 per month, Veterans' administration announced.

Widows of these deceased veterans are entitled to receive $60 per month for themselves and $15 for one child plus $15.00 each for any additional children. In the event that both parents are deceased, the child's legal guardian receives $30 per month. If there are two children, the guardian receives $45.00, plus $12 for each additional child.

Recent legislation removed previous restrictions as to the total amount payable in these cases. In effect, the law authorizes compensation for each child surviving the veteran regardless of the number of children and grants a 20 per cent increase in payments. All children are entitled to this compensation until they reach the age of 18 unless they marry before that time. In the event a child becomes mentally or physically incompetent, payments will be continued during the incompetency. Benefits also may continue after the age of 18 while the child is going to school, but cease upon his reaching the age of 21 years.

Questions and Answers

Q. My son has been in service 18 months, has been overseas a year and is still in Berlin. He didn't make an allotment to me as we didn't know he could, and I have just found out nearly every one drew allotments from sons in service, which I could have done if I had known about it. He sent me a little money he could spare and bought himself a bond each month. I do not own a farm, just rent, only milk a few cows. Have five children under 10, all in school except one. I wonder if I could draw any back pay for the time he has been gone, also start drawing now. I surely need it.—Mrs. P. O. D., Seymour, Mo.

A. Your son is at fault in this matter, since all men going into the service and especially when they go overseas are thoroughly briefed concerning their dependents and their allotment rights. Their dependents are entered on their service records. I do not think you can get back allotment but, if your son will ask his commanding officer for an allotment for you, he can obtain it since it is entirely voluntary on the part of your son. There have been rare instances where the war department has recognized claims for back pay in these cases, however, and to be sure, you should write the Office of Dependency Benefits, War Department, Newark 2, N. J., and explain your case.

Q. Is it true that I don't have to pay the premiums on my husband's national service insurance as he is a disabled veteran of World War II, and will I get the money back which I have already paid?—Mrs. C. E. B., Lewistown, Pa.

A. No, it is not necessarily true. Veterans' administration says that a veteran of World War II must be totally disabled for a period of at least six months before he is eligible to make application for a waiver of his premium payments; and that this waiver, if granted, shall not affect any premiums which become due more than a year before received by the VA. There is no money returned. Suggest you consult with your local VA office or with your local post of the American Legion.

Q. My son went overseas in March, 1941. In May he wrote for me to fix allotment papers and in June they began taking out of his pay and did so until he died in December, 1941. Can we get that pay?—Mrs. W. W. Pontiac, Ill.

A. Yes, and also six months additional pay. Write to the Office of Dependency Benefits, War Department, Newark 2, N. J., and explain your case fully, giving your son's full name, serial number, the date and manner of his death, if you know. Your answer may be delayed, since this department of the army is in process of moving to St. Louis.

Q. I am a widow of a veteran of World War I who died while in France. I never did receive an allotment or any of his insurance. Am I due anything?—Mrs. R. L. K., New Hope, Ala.

A. If you are the legal widow of a veteran who died in France in World War I you are entitled to his insurance. If he had government insurance, you also are entitled to a widow's pension. Suggest that you contact your nearest Veterans' administration office, probably at Birmingham or Mobile, and give them full particulars of your case.

THIS is a burst of loud applause for Eric Sevareid's autobiography, "Not So Wild a Dream." It's the story of a boy from a small town in South Dakota who has never lost his love for that small town, through the years when he's become one of our best political and war reporters. Many of us will never forget some of his broadcasts over CBS during the war, and still look forward to his Saturday night talks. Sevareid covered the war in France, England, China, Italy, Germany and Burma. But this is not primarily a war book; it is the inspiring story of 34 years of a man's life, superbly written, a story of the world in our times.

When Your Back Hurts -

And Your Strength and Energy is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and nervous when the kidneys fail to remove wastes and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headache, dizziness, getting up at night, leg pains, swelling, sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smearing and burning in another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

There should be no doubts that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. For Dr. Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide approval than on something too hastily known. Doan's have been tried and tested for many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

Kathleen Norris Says:

Pitying Yourself Is Wasted Effort

Neil Syndicate.—WNU Features.

She has nursed what she calls "the cruel injustice of Mama's will."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

SOME years ago an elderly woman died, leaving two daughters, both married. When her will was read it was discovered that she had left most of her estate, which approximated about $40,000, to her elder daughter, who was unmarried at the time the will was written.

The younger daughter, Dolores, whose husband was a prosperous man, got her fair share of rugs, laces, china. She got a store and the flat above it, valued at about $10,000. Everything else went to Yvonne.

But Yvonne had married well, too. She complemented took her large share of the inheritance, even though a good many persons felt that under the circumstances Dolores should have had half. Things went on for a year or two, and then, as in a book, another later will was found making a fair even division of the estate. This was awkward for Yvonne and her husband; they had spent, invested, shifted things about, they had to put up far more security than was normal for this was in the heart of the depression, and values were low. It seriously cramped and embarrassed them; in the end Dolores got the old homestead, too.

That was more than 20 years ago. The sisters have never been friends since. Dolores would be amiable enough, for she has no grievance, but Yvonne is adamant. She has nursed what she calls the "cruel injustice of mama's will." Her husband tells her she is never will get over it. Her daughter repeats resentfully that once "Mama" Dolores did something horrible to a man. "If you ask Yvonne straight out what was unjust, what was horrible about it, she purses up her lips, sighs and says that no one will ever know what it did to her nerves, and she never can forgive Dolores."

Smouldering bitterness. Yvonne and Alan have done well. They have a handsome home, two cars, country club membership, a large circle of friends. Their only son had a good war record; their only daughter is married well. But Yvonne grieves on. That Dolores should have gotten the amythyst set and the store, and then, when Alan's fortunes were at their lowest, should have come in with this claim for so much more—it's just not bearable. Yvonne has nursed her own life, smouldering for all these years over Dolores' luck.

Had her mother been without means and dependent upon Alan and Yvonne, no such situation could have arisen. Thousands of old persons are entirely without financial resources, that might have been her case. Her son might have been lost in the war, as so many thousands of boys were. Her daughter's painful cold and fever last winter might have been infantile paralysis. Alan might fall to love with some younger and more fascinating woman. She herself might be sold, by the family doctor, that the wailing little lamp in her side meant leg and legging illness. There are real troubles in this life and these are a few of them.

But to go on brooding over a property division that was decided unfairly in her favor, in the first place, exaggerate it and dwell on it, to embitter family relations and convince her own family that mother received a staggering and unjustifiable loss, this is sheer stupidity. This life for most of us is a trip over perfect storms, no have to steer through dangerous waters from the time we leave mother's

ALLEGED INJUSTICES

Most everyone has some bad luck, has suffered some losses or disappointments. Often it is nobody's fault. On the other hand, the misfortune may be directly attributable to someone's greed, or ambition, or malice. In any case, after it is over there is seldom much that can be done. Worst of all is regretting, complaining, making oneself miserable with self-pity.

In the story Miss Norris relates today, the woman involved has no just cause for complaint. She has received from life all that she is entitled to, and probably a good deal more. But because she couldn't keep the major part of her mother's property, awarded to her by an early will, she is nursing a perpetual grudge against her sister.

This woman has everything she needs, being well-to-do. She is still pretty, although her children are grown. There is no sickness, no scandal, no difficulty that matters. Her daughter is happily married, her son has returned safely from the war. She should be happy, but she cannot be with this gnawing resentment against "the injustice of Mama's will." The "injustice" was in the second will—the testament that divided the property equally between herself and her sister.

Thousands of people are unhappy about alleged injustices. If they would only look about them, and see how bravely and uncomplainingly others are trying to go along who have suffered cruel misfortunes of all sorts, sickness, poverty, disgrace, accidents and deaths of loved ones, they would realize how well off they are.

protecting wing. Unless we can forget the lost ring, the missed opportunity, the bad investment, the careless sentence overheard, we are leading queer and twisted lives.

She sees Weakness in Others. In other words, self-pity and useless regret are corrosive elements. They destroy us. Yvonne sees this fast enough when a whining beggar comes to her door.

She sees a ragged, unshaven man, she hears the story of the lost job, illness, of the wife who deserted and the money that was lost.

He partner cheated him; he broke his arm; his overcoat was stolen.

She smiles deprecatingly as he tells her all this. He makes no impression upon Yvonne, except one of distaste. A big strong man going from door to door with his hat in his hand—he ought to be ashamed of himself!

She never sees the similarity between him and herself, that she is always asking for pity and sympathy. She never knows that her friends see a strong, healthy, pretty woman surrounded by comforts and interests, and are bored to death with the old, old story.

"Why, of course, Dolores got her share—and that was sure on Lake Street that has practically doubled in value. What Henry and Dolores wanted with more money—why they didn't simply destroy that second will. I never will know! I'll never forget poor Alan coming in and telling me that they'd found it. I never will get over the shock to my nerves, not as long as I live."

STRANGE NERVE AILMENT

A mysterious nerve disease which concentrates particularly in the fingers, legs and toes, has been reported by Dr. Robert Warthenberg of the U. of California. He said the supposed disease was no handicap but was very stubborn.

The doctor said he had studied the disease for 10 years but still could not trace its cause. He said it apparently was the result of a virus of low virulence which attacks the skin or superficial nerves of the human body exclusively.

Start the Day Right With a Good Breakfast
(See Recipes Below)

Breakfast Breads

How's breakfast interest at your home these days? Does everyone look forward to sitting down for breakfast because mother is sure to have some fluffy hot bread that they can smell baking while they're going through the finishing touches of bathing and dressing? Or, is the family anxious to scamper through breakfast without giving it so much as a sniff?

If the latter is the case, then sit down right now and do something drastic about it. You may have to do without bacon and sausage, those breakfast standbys, but the ingredients required for breakfast breads are available. Let them give you a lift for that important first meal of the day. Your family can't resist light, fluffy rolls with the tangy smell of cinnamon and raisins, or light and hearty pancakes. Bran is a good food item for any day of the week, but it's especially good at breakfast when served in these tasty muffins.

Bran-Molasses Muffins.

1½ cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
1½ cups sour milk or buttermilk
½ cup molasses
1½ cups bran
1 egg, slightly beaten
2 tablespoons melted shortening
Sift flour once; measure, add baking powder, soda and salt. Sift again. Add milk, molasses and bran, let stand until most of the liquid is absorbed by the bran. Add egg and melted shortening which has been slightly cooled. Add flour mixture and stir just enough to moisten the dry ingredients. Fill greased muffin pans ¾ full and bake in a hot (400 degrees) oven for 20 to 25 minutes.

Peanut Butter Bread.

3 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup sugar
½ cup dates or candied orange peel
½ cup orange juice or milk
½ cup peanut butter

Sift flour, measure; add baking powder, salt and sugar. Sift again and add dates or orange peel, Add milk or orange juice slowly to peanut butter, blending thoroughly. Four into flour mixture and mix just until dry ingredients are moistened. Do not beat. Turn into a greased loaf pan and bake in a moderate (350 degrees) oven for about 1 hour.

*Sally Lunn.

2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening
1 egg
¾ cup milk

Sift flour; measure and add baking powder and salt, sift again. Cream shortening, add sugar gradually, continue beating until light and fluffy. Add sifted flour mixture and stir just enough to moisten the dry ingredients. Do not beat. Pour batter into a greased square pan.

Make Tastier Breads

When using flour or sugar for bread making, make sure that they are sifted or they will not measure out properly. It is often necessary to sift sugar to get lumps out of it.

Yeast breads are usually put in hot ovens for 10 minutes to stop the growth of the yeast, then lowered to finish baking. Quick breads are baked in a moderate oven, as a general rule.

sprinkle with topping and bake in a hot (400 degrees) oven for about 20 minutes. Cut in squares and serve hot.

Topping for Sally Lunn.

½ cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon melted butter
Combine brown sugar and cinnamon, blend with butter.
Corn cakes are a variation of pancakes and are especially good on cold, hard-to-get-up mornings. Make them nice and thin and serve with honey or syrup.

Lacy Corn Cakes.

(Makes 40 cakes)
1½ cups yellow cornmeal
1 teaspoon salt
2 eggs, well beaten
2 cups milk
4 tablespoons melted shortening
Combine cornmeal and salt. Combine eggs, milk and melted shortening. Pour in cornmeal and stir until well combined. Bake on a hot griddle, stirring batter each time before removing a spoonful. Serve while hot.

Streusel Coffee Cake.

1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon mace
6 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons shortening
1 egg
½ cup milk

Sift dry ingredients. Cut in shortening, add unbeaten egg and milk. Stir until smooth. Turn into a square or loaf pan which has been greased and top with the following mixture:

Streusel Topping.

4 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon butter
½ teaspoon mace

Mix all ingredients with a fork until mixture crumbles. Scatter over top of batter and bake in a hot (400 degrees) oven for 25 minutes.

Blitz Coffee Cake.

Bake Streusel coffee cake in tin, preferably a round one. Cover top, before baking, with shaved almonds and brown sugar. After cake has baked and cooled, split in half and spread with whipped cream and raspberry jam.

If you want to impart a buttery flavor to baked goods without using butter itself, then use sour cream. It imparts richness and taste to almost any baked food.

Sour Cream Waffles.

1 cup flour
¼ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
¾ cup rich sour cream
¾ cup buttermilk
2 eggs, beaten separately

Add well beaten yolks, sour cream and buttermilk to melted shortening and sifted dry ingredients. Mix thoroughly. Fold in carefully the stiffly beaten egg whites and bake on a hot waffle iron.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

LYNN SAYS:

Sponge cakes should never be removed from the pan until they are thoroughly cooled. The air cells in these cakes, as in angel food cakes are so delicate that they cannot hold the weight of the cake unless the cake is thoroughly cooled.

Bake muffins and cup cakes in fluted cups to save fats and to conserve on dishwashing. The pan does not have to be greased, and neither does the cup.

Record-shattering Crops Boost Farm Production to New Peak

WNU Features

While international crises and domestic difficulties have been dominating the news scene, American farmers have been rolling up one of the most impressive production records in history during the current year.

Crop production for 1946 is setting an all-time peak, 2½ per cent above the record output of 1942, best previous year, and 28 per cent above the average for the prewar years of 1935-39, a summary compiled by department of agriculture discloses. Wheat and corn production soared to new high marks, followed by record-shattering harvests of tobacco, peaches, pears, plums, truck crops and potatoes. Other crops have come through in good measure, with exception of cotton, rye, broomcorn, dry beans and pecans.

Livestock production continued high, despite critical feed shortages in mid-year.

Taking agricultural production as a whole, 1946 may stand for a long time as the farmer's biggest year, the agriculture department concludes.

The story of the farmer's big year, as told in the pictures:

1. FARM RECORDS are being broken throughout the nation as farmers wind up the biggest year in agriculture's history. This scene of a farmer storing corn in temporary cribs is being repeated throughout the grain producing areas as farmers gather in the greatest feed crop ever grown in this country.

2. FOOD NEEDS exceeded even heavy wartime demands and farmers met the challenge with the largest harvested wheat acreage since 1938—940,000 acres over 1945. The combination of improved wheat varieties, good growing weather and national yield of 17.8 bushels per acre resulted in whopping 1,69,422,000 bushel crop. Production of all food grains set a new record—more than 37 million tons.

During the harvest season, farmers worked night and day, frequently with multiple crews and machines, as shown here, to save the precious grain. The new crop helped to relieve the bread shortage which resulted at mid-year when the nation shared its slender wheat stocks with hungry people overseas. Exports of wheat in this calendar year may reach 360 million bushels, highest since 1921.

3. READY FOR THE FUTURE. With the help of this big year, farmers are in better position to face conditions ahead. Good feed crops will help to maintain livestock production at high levels and savings nearly 20 billion dollars provide a reserve for poor years or farm improvement.

This West Virginia farm, with its crops set in easy-to-work contoured strips, offers a pattern for the future. With his farm's soil enriched by lime and green manure, and protected from costly erosion, the operator has the assurance of maximum efficiency and minimum production costs. As of July 1, 2,790,000 acres had been laid out in contoured strip cropping, with plans ready for an additional 2,250,000 acres. Two-thirds of all U. S. farms are actively participating in 1,675 soil conservation districts.

4. GOOD WEATHER favored the farmer in his fight for big crops. An early spring sent crops off to a flying start. Ideal conditions, illustrated in this summer scene on a New England farm, often helped the farmer at critical times, such as haying and grain harvest.

Little wheat was lost because of wet weather during harvest or after, but sudden ripening of grain over large areas produced more grain at one time than elevators or railroads could handle. Drouth did strike some areas, notably New Mexico and Arizona, and prolonged rain interfered with planting of grain sorghums. The weather wasn't perfect, but it was generally better than 1945 and proved a big factor in a record crop.

5. BIG BUYERS. Record production and good prices have created the greatest farm purchasing power of all time. From total cash receipts of more than 23 billion dollars this year, farmers will realize a net income of more than 14½ billion dollars, or more than three times the net income of 1940.

Like city folks, farmers and goods scarce and prices above prewar levels. As he shops for new shoes, this farmer finds proof that the average price of farm work shoes rose from $2.53 for the 1935-39 period to $4.49 on June 15. Prices received by farmers for their goods had doubled meanwhile.

6. MORE HELP, provided by returning veterans and war plant workers, made the job easier for the farmer, but everyone had to work hard, early and late, to handle the bumper output.

Typical of the veteran's return to the land, this ex-army sergeant and his wife, former army nurse, bought an Alabama farm with the help of an FSA loan. By mid-year 1,045,000 veterans were working on farms, representing about three-fourths of the number of farm workers who entered military service before July 1, 1945.

7. TWO ON ONE means good corn and accounts for this North Carolina grower's pride in a promising crop resulting from use of hybrid seed corn and contoured field. In the nation as a whole, two out of every three acres this year were in high-yielding hybrids, accounting for 20 per cent increase in corn yields by department of agriculture estimates.

In some sections of the corn belt, hybrids were planted on 100 per cent of the acreage, boosting Iowa's corn yield to a phenomenal 61 bushels per acre. Better varieties of other crops, developed by agricultural scientists, helped push production to new records. Improved fertilizers and new cultural methods also boosted yields.

8. NEW TOOLS also helped to swell 1946 production. Expansion by REA co-operatives brought electricity to additional thousands of farms and made daily chores like milking faster and easier. On July 1, nearly 53 per cent of all U. S. farms received central station electric service and new customers were being connected to REA lines at the rate of 250,000 per year. Farmers also found DDT and chemical weed killers potent weapons against old enemies.

Production of new farm machinery during the first half of the year fell below the war-limited production of a year earlier, forcing most farmers to get along with old machines. Tires, fuel and seed were in fair supply, but containers, steel products and lumber continued scarce. Farmers used more fertilizer in their drive for maximum production.

Man's 'Best Friend' Causes Most Farm Accidents

Old Dobbin may be man's best friend—but he doesn't act like it. Feet, horses are involved in more accidents on American farms than any other animal, including the bull. H. Herman Young of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., told delegates to the farm safety section of the National Safety Council's 34th annual safety congress in Chicago.

Life on farms is full of peril, Dr. Young asserted, pointing to a nine-year survey of farm accidents, made under joint auspices of Mayo Clinic and the safety council, which disclosed that 39,700 farmers were killed at work during the period. About 133,200 farm residents were killed accidentally and 109,125,000 non-fatal farm home and work accidents also occurred in that time, he reported.

"The farmer usually is his own boss or employs only a few men, probably carries no accident insurance, and is not as conscious of the need for safety measures as those employed in other industries," Dr. Young said.

Accidents take an enormous toll every year, with victims not limited to farmers, delegates to the safety congress were told.

Statistics show that there's an accidental death every 5½ minutes, a traffic death every 18½ minutes, an occupational death every 23 minutes and a home death every 15½ minutes.

National Safety Council is a non-profit, non-commercial corporation supported mainly by industrial concerns. It has 25 separate sections to deal with safety in every field.

Wyoming Homesteads Open to Veterans

WASHINGTON.—Want a home in Wyoming or a ranch in Shoshone near Yellowstone park? You're a World War II veteran with good character and good luck, you might get one. First step is to get an application to the bureau of reclamation project office at Cheyenne, Wyo., before November 23.

The bureau will throw open to Heart Mountain division of its oldest project, the Shoshone. Applicants will be rated as to character, industry, capital and farm experience by a local examining board, which will select the top 100 candidates to participate in the drawing for the 63 farms. Three other land openings for homesteading of 5,312 acres of irrigated land in Washington and Idaho also are scheduled this winter.

Wave Takes Army Job, Finally Gets on Ship

CINCINNATI.—After 26 months of land-locked service with the WAVES, Miss Edith Dunn finally got aboard a ship—by taking a job with the army. The Ohio river division engineers, local army unit, resorted to naval tactics to help solve the housing problem of 22 women employees. They are housed on two quarterboats moored here, the girls paying $15 a month rent.

Kathleen Norris Says:

Pitying Yourself Is Wasted Effort

Hell Hyndicate.—WNU Features.

She has nursed what she calls "the cruel injustice of Mama's will."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

SOME years ago an elderly woman died, leaving two daughters, both married. When her will was read it was discovered that she had left most of her estate, which approximated about $40,000, to her elder daughter, who was unmarried at the time the will was written.

The younger daughter, Dolores, whose husband was a prosperous man, got her fair share of rugs, laces, china. She got a store and the flat above it, valued at about $10,000. Everything else went to Yvonne.

But Yvonne had married well, too. She complementarily took her large share of the inheritance, even though a good many persons felt that under the circumstances Dolores should have had half. Things went on for a year or two, and then, in a book, another later will was found making a fair even division of the estate. This was awkward for Yvonne and her husband; they had spent, invested, shifted things about, they had to put up for more security than was normal for this was in the heart of the depression, and values were low. It seriously cramped and embarrassed them; in the end Dolores got the old homestead, too.

That was more than 20 years ago. The sisters have never been friends since. Dolores would be amiable enough, for she has no grievance, but Yvonne is adamant. She has nursed what she calls the "cruel injustice of mama's will." Her husband tells her gravely that she "never will get over it." Her daughter repeats recently that once "Aunt Dolores did something horrible to mama." If you ask Yvonne straight out what was unjust, what was horrible about it, she purses up her lips, sighs and says that no one will ever know what it did to her nerves, and she never can forgive Dolores.

Smouldering Bitterness. Yvonne and Alan have done well. They have a handsome home, two cars, country club membership, a large circle of friends. Their only son had a good war record; their only daughter is married well. But Yvonne grieves on. That Dolores should have gotten the amythyst set and the store, and then, when Alan's fortunes were at their lowest, should have come in with this claim for so much more—it's just not bearable. Yvonne has ruined her own life, smouldering for all these years over Dolores' luck.

Had her mother been without means and dependent upon Alan and Yvonne, no such situation could have arisen. Thousands of old persons are entirely without financial resources; that might have been her case. Her son might have been lost in the war, as so many thousands of boys were. Her daughter's painful cold and fever last winter might have been infantile paralysis. Alan might fall in love with some younger and more fascinating woman. She herself might be told, by the family doctor, that the smouldering little lump in her side meant lung and agonizing illness. There are real troubles in this life and there are a few of them.

But to go on brooding over a property division that was decided unfairly in her favor in the first place, exaggerate it and dwell on it, to embitter family relations and convince her own family that mother received a staggering and unforgettable blow—this is sheer stupidity. This life for most of us is a trip over perilous rapids; we have to steer through dangerous waters from the time we leave mother's

Most everyone has some bad luck, has suffered some losses or disappointments. Often it is nobody's fault. On the other hand, the misfortune may be directly attributable to someone's greed, or ambition, or malice. In any case, after it is over there is seldom much that can be done. Worst of all is regretting, complaining, making oneself miserable with self-pity.

In the story Miss Norris relates today, the woman involved has no just cause for complaint. She has received from life all that she is entitled to, and probably a good deal more. But because she couldn't keep the major part of her mother's property, awarded to her by an early will, she is nursing a perpetual grudge against her sister.

This woman has everything she needs, being well-to-do. She is still pretty, although her children are grown. There is no sickness, no scandal, no difficulty that matters. Her daughter is happily married, her son has returned safely from the war. She should be happy, but she cannot be with this gnawing resentment against "the injustice of Mama's will." The "injustice" was in the second will—the testament that divided the property equally between herself and her sister.

Thousands of people are unhappy about alleged injustices. If they would only look about them, and see how bravely and uncomplainingly others are trying to go along who have suffered cruel misfortunes of all sorts, sickness, poverty, disgrace, accidents and deaths of loved ones, they would realize how well off they are.

protecting wing. Unless we can forget the lost ring, the missed opportunity, the bad investment, the careless sentence overheard, we are leading queer and twisted lives.

She Sees Weakness in Others. In other words, self-pity and useless regret are corrosive elements. They destroy us. Yvonne sees this fast enough when a whining beggar comes to her door.

She sees a ragged, unshaven man, she hears the story of the lost job, illness, of the wife who deserted and the money that was lost.

His partner cheated him; he broke his arm; his overcoat was stolen.

She smiles deprecatingly as he tells her all this. He makes no impression upon Yvonne, except one of distaste. A big strong man going from door to door with his hat in his hand—he ought to be ashamed of himself!

She never sees the similarity between him and herself, that she is always asking for pity and sympathy. She never knows that her friends see a strong, healthy, pretty woman surrounded by comforts and interests, and are bored to death with the old, old story.

Why, of course, Dolores got her share—and that nice store on Lake street that has practically doubled in value. What Henry and Dolores wanted with more money—why they didn't simply destroy that second will, I never will know! I'll never forget poor Alan coming in and telling me that they'd found it. I never will get over the shock to my nerves, not as long as I live.

STRANGE NERVE AILMENT

A mysterious nerve disease which concentrates particularly in the fingers, legs and toes, has been reported by Dr. Robert Wartenberg of the U. of California. He said the unnamed disease was no handicap but was very stubborn.

The neurologist said he had studied the disease for 10 years but still could not trace its cause. He said it apparently was the result of a virus of low virulence which attacks the skin or superficial nerves of the human body exclusively.

(See Recipes Below)

Breakfast Breads

How's breakfast interest at your home these days? Does everyone look forward to sitting down for breakfast? Because mother is sure to have some fluffy hot bread that they can eat while they're going through the finishing touches of bathing and dressing? Or, is the family anxious to scamper through breakfast without giving it so much as a sniff?

If the latter is the case, then sit down right now and do something drastic about it. You may have to do without bacon and sausage, those breakfast standbys, but the ingredients required for breakfast breads are available. Let them give you a lift for that important first meal of the day. Your family can't resist light, fluffy rolls with the tangy smell of cinnamon and raisins, or light and hearty pancakes.

Bran is a good food item for any day of the week, but it's especially good at breakfast when served in these tasty muffins:

Bran-Molasses Muffins.
1½ cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
1½ cups sour milk or buttermilk
½ cup molasses
1½ cups bran
1 egg, slightly beaten
2 tablespoons melted shortening
Sift flour once; measure; add baking powder, soda and salt. Sift again. Add milk, molasses and bran; let stand until most of the liquid is absorbed by the bran. Add egg and melted shortening which has been slightly cooled. Add flour mixture and stir just enough to moisten the dry ingredients. Fill greased muffin pans ¾ full and bake in a hot (400 degrees) oven for 20 to 25 minutes.

Peanut Butter Bread.
3 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup sugar
1 cup dates or candied orange peel
1½ cups orange juice or milk
½ cup peanut butter
Sift flour; measure; add baking powder, salt and sugar. Sift again and add dates and orange peel. Add milk and peanut butter, blending thoroughly. Pour into flour mixture and mix just until dry ingredients are moistened. Do not beat. Turn into a greased loaf pan and bake in a moderate (350 degrees) oven for about 1 hour.

Sally Lunn.
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening
1 egg
½ cup milk
Sift flour; measure and add baking powder and salt, sift again. Cream shortening and sugar gradually; continue beating until light and fluffy. Add sifted flour mixture and stir just enough to moisten the dry ingredients. Do not beat. Pour batter into a greased square pan.

Make Tastier Breads
When using flour or sugar for bread making, make sure that they are sifted or they will not measure out properly. It is often necessary to sift sugar to get lumps out of it. Yeast breads are usually put in hot ovens for 15 minutes to stop the growth of the yeast, then lowered to finish baking. Quick breads are baked in a moderate oven, as a general rule.

sprinkle with topping and bake in a hot (400 degrees) oven for about 20 minutes. Cut in squares and serve hot.

Topping for Sally Lunn.

½ cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon melted butter
Combine brown sugar and cinnamon; blend with butter.
Corn cakes are a variation of pancakes and are especially good on cold, hard-to-get-up mornings. Make them nice and thin and serve with honey or syrup.

Laosy Corn Cakes.
(Makes 40 cakes)
1½ cups yellow cornmeal
1 teaspoon salt
2 eggs, well beaten
2 cups milk
4 tablespoons melted shortening
Combine cornmeal and salt. Combine eggs, milk and melted shortening. Pour in cornmeal and stir until well combined. Bake on a hot griddle, stirring batter each time before removing a spoonful. Serve while hot.

Streusel Coffee Cake.
1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon mace
6 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons shortening
1 egg
½ cup milk
Sift dry ingredients. Cut in shortening, add unbeaten egg and milk. Stir until smooth. Turn into a square or loaf pan which has been greased and top with the following mixture:

Streusel Topping.
4 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon butter
½ teaspoon mace
Mix all ingredients with a fork until mixture crumbles. Scatter over top of batter and bake in a hot (400 degrees) oven for 25 minutes.

Blitz Coffee Cake.
Bake Streusel coffee cake in tin, preferably a round one. Cover top, before baking, with shaved almonds and brown sugar. After cake has baked and cooled, split in half and spread with whipped cream and raspberry jam.

If you want to impart a buttery flavor to baked goods without using butter itself, then use sour cream. It imparts richness and taste to almost any baked food.

Sour Cream Waffles.
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
¾ cup rich sour cream
¾ cup buttermilk
2 eggs, beaten separately
Add well beaten yolks, sour cream and buttermilk to melted shortening and sifted dry ingredients. Mix thoroughly. Fold in carefully the stiffly beaten egg whites and bake on a hot waffle iron. Released by Western Newspaper Union.

LYNN SAYS:

Sponge cakes should never be removed from the pan until they are thoroughly cooled. The air cells in these cakes, as in angel food cakes are so delicate that they cannot hold the weight of the cake unless the cake is thoroughly cooled.

Bake muffins and cup cakes in fluted cups to save fat and to conserve on dishwashing. The pan does not have to be greased, and neither does the cup.

BANNER HARVEST

Record-shattering Crops Boost Farm Production to New Peak

WNU Features

While international crises and domestic difficulties have been dominating the news scene, American farmers have been rolling up one of the most impressive production records in history during the current year.

Crop production for 1946 is setting an all-time peak, 2½ per cent above the record output of 1942, best previous year, and 28 per cent above the average for the prewar years of 1935-39, a summary compiled by department of agriculture discloses. Wheat and corn production soared to new high marks, followed by record-shattering harvests of tobacco, peaches, pears, plums, truck crops and potatoes. Other crops have come through in good measure, with exception of cotton, rye, broomcorn, dry beans and pecans.

Livestock production continued high, despite critical feed shortages in mid-year.

Taking agricultural production as a whole, 1946 may stand for a long time as the farmer's biggest year, the agriculture department concludes.

The story of the farmer's big year, as told in the pictures:

1. FARM RECORDS are being broken throughout the nation as farmers wind up the biggest year in agriculture's history. This scene of a farmer storing corn in temporary cribs is being repeated throughout the grain producing areas as farmers gather in the greatest feed crop ever grown in this country.

2. FOOD NEEDS exceeded even heavy wartime demands and farmers met the challenge with the largest harvested wheat acreage since 1938—940,000 acres over 1945. The combination of improved wheat varieties, good growing weather and national yield of 17.8 bushels per acre resulted in whopping 1,669,422,000 bushel crop. Production of all food grains set a new record—more than 37 million tons.

During the harvest season, farmers worked night and day, frequently with multiple crews and machines, as shown here, to save the precious grain. The new crop helped to relieve the bread shortage which resulted at mid-year when the nation shared its slender wheat stocks with hungry people overseas. Exports of wheat in this calendar year may reach 360 million bushels, highest since 1921.

3. READY FOR THE FUTURE. With the help of this big year, farmers are in better position to face conditions ahead. Good feed crops will help to maintain livestock production at high levels and savings of nearly 20 billion dollars provide a reserve for poor years or farm improvement.

This West Virginia farm, with its crops set in easy-to-work contoured strips, offers a pattern for the future. With his farm's soil enriched with lime and green manure, and crops protected from costly erosion, the operator has the assurance of maximum efficiency and minimum production costs. As of July 2, 780,000 acres had been laid out in contoured strip cropping, with plans ready for an additional 2,250,000 acres. Two-thirds of all U. S. farms are actively participating in 1,675 soil conservation districts.

4. GOOD WEATHER favored the farmer in his fight for big crops. An early spring sent crops off to a flying start. Ideal conditions, illustrated in this summer scene on a New England farm, often helped the farmer at critical times, such as haying and grain harvest.

Little wheat was lost because of wet weather during harvest or after, but sudden ripening of grain over large areas produced more grain at one time than elevators or railroads could handle. Drouth did strike some areas, notably New Mexico and Arizona, and prolonged rain interfered with planting of grain sorghums. The weather wasn't perfect, but it was generally better than 1945 and proved a big factor in a record crop.

5. BIG BUYERS. Record production and good prices have created the greatest farm purchasing power of all time. From total cash receipts of more than 23 billion dollars this year, farmers will realize a net income of more than 14½ billion dollars, or more than three times the net income of 1940.

Like city folks, farmers find goods scarce and prices above prewar levels. As he shops for new shoes, this farmer finds proof that the average price of farm work shoes rose from $2.53 for the 1935-39 period to $4.49 on June 15. Prices received by farmers for their goods had doubled meanwhile.

6. MORE HELP. provided by returning veterans and war plant workers, made the job easier for the farmer, but everyone had to work hard, early and late, to handle the bumper output.

Typical of the veteran's return to the land, this ex-army sergeant and his wife, former army nurse, bought an Alabama farm with the help of an FSA loan. By mid-year 1,045,000 veterans were working on farms, representing about three-fourths of the number of farm workers who entered military service before July 1, 1945.

7. TWO ON ONE means good corn and accounts for this North Carolina grower's pride in a promising crop resulting from use of hybrid seed corn and contoured field. In the nation as a whole, two out of every three acres this year were in high-yielding hybrids, accounting for 20 per cent increase in corn yields by department of agriculture estimates.

In some sections of the corn belt, hybrids were planted on 100 per cent of the acreage, boosting Iowa's corn yield to a phenomenal 61 bushels per acre. Better varieties of other crops, developed by agricultural scientists, helped push production to new records. Improved fertilizers and new cultural methods also boosted yields.

8. NEW TOOLS also helped to swell 1946 production. Expansion by REA co-operatives brought electricity to additional thousands of farms and made daily chores like milking (above) faster and easier. On July 1, nearly 53 per cent of all U. S. farms received central station electric service and new customers were being connected to REA lines at the rate of 250,000 per year. Farmers also found DDT and chemical weed killers potent weapons against old enemies.

Production of new farm machinery during the first half of the year fell below the war-limited production of a year earlier, forcing most farmers to get along with old machines. Tires, fuel and seed were in fair supply, but containers, steel products and lumber continued scarce. Farmers used more fertilizer in their drive for maximum production.

Man's 'Best Friend' Causes Most Farm Accidents

Old Dobbin may be man's best friend—but he doesn't act like it. In fact, horses are involved in more accidents on American farms than any other animal, including the bull. H. Herman Young of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., told delegates to the farm safety section of the National Safety Council's 34th annual safety congress in Chicago. Life on farms is full of peril, Dr. Young asserted, pointing to a nine-year survey of farm accidents, made under joint auspices of Mayo Clinic and the safety council, which disclosed that 38,700 farmers were killed at work during the period. About 133,200 farm residents were killed accidentally and 100,125,000 non-fatal farm home and work accidents also occurred in that time, he reported.

"The farmer usually is his own boss or employs only a few men, probably carries no accident insurance, and is not as conscious of the need for safety measures as those employed in other industries," Dr. Young said.

Accidents take an enormous toll every year, with victims not limited to farmers, delegates to the safety congress were told.

Statistics show that there's an accidental death every 3½ minutes, a traffic death every 18½ minutes, an occupational death every 33 minutes and a home death every 15½ minutes.

National Safety Council is a non-profit, non-commercial corporation supported mainly by industrial concerns. It has 25 separate sections to deal with safety in every field.

Wyoming Homesteads Open to Veterans

WASHINGTON.—Want a home in Wyoming or a ranch in Shoshone? Near Yellowstone park? If you're a World War II veteran with good character and good luck, you might get one. First step is to fill an application to the bureau of reclamation project office at Cheyenne, Wyo., before November 23. The bureau will throw open to homestead entry 83 irrigated farm lands, a total of 7,720 acres, on the Heart Mountain division of its old project, the Shoshone.

Applicants will be rated as to character, industry, capital and farm experience by a local examining board, which will select the top 160 candidates to participate in the drawing for the 83 farms.

Three other land openings for homesteading of 5,372 acres of irrigated land in Washington and Idaho also are scheduled this winter.

Wave Takes Army Job, Finally Gets on Ship

CINCINNATI.—After 26 months of land-locked service with the WAVES, Miss Edith Dunn finally got aboard a ship—by taking a job with the army. The Ohio river division engineers, local army unit, resorted to naval tactics to help solve the housing problem of 22 women employees. They are housed on two quarterboats moored here, the girls paying $15 a month rent.

So easy to use that even a man can clean house!

THE BRILLIANT HEADLIGHT points out dust and dirt, the revolving brush digs it out, and the powerful suction picks it up and stores the dirt in the big dust-proof bag. That's how easy housecleaning can be with the new post-war Royal cleaner. Nozzle adjustments provide efficient cleaning for rugs of varying thicknesses or for bare floors; large free-turning wheels make cleaning nearly effortless and protect floors from scratches; available attachments are simple to use and do your complete housecleaning in one operation. These Royal cleaners are now available at all Central Maine Power Company stores for $33.00, without extra attachments.

MOTOR VEHICLE REGISTRANTS

No new registration plates will be issued for 1947 because of a shortage of steel. Instead a windshield sticker will be issued to validate your 1946 number plate. These stickers are to be displayed on the lower right hand corner of the windshield. The number appearing on your registration certificate will correspond to the number on the windshield sticker and has no relation to your 1946 plate number.
